

How this One-Profit Coach is built by Studebaker on the sturdy STANDARD SIX CHASSIS

SUPERFICIALLY other coaches may resemble this Studebaker Standard Six, but the resemblance will not stand analysis.

Only two cars are made on a one-profit basis—Ford in the lowest price field and Studebaker in the fine car field. Only in these two cases are all bodies, engines, clutches, gear sets, springs, differentials, steering gear and axles designed, engineered and manufactured by one company.

Contrast this with the average car, where the extra profits of many outside parts and body makers must be included in the purchase price.

These profits are part of the production cost of the car—the same as the steel and wood of the body. They do not make any car one whit better.

Studebaker has achieved one-profit manufacture through years of far-sighted management and through sacrifice on the part of stockholders. Earnings which might have been distributed have been retained in the business to build one of the largest car foundries in the world, to erect stamping mills, forgings, etc., to purchase the finest labor-saving machinery, to construct enormous body-building plants.

As a result, resources totaling one hundred million dollars are concentrated upon the production of one-profit automobiles such as this Standard Six Coach.

What does it mean to you?

To you, as an automobile buyer, this means:

1. A Lower Price.
2. A Better Car.

A LOWER PRICE, because Studebaker does not need to pile its profit upon the profits of outside parts manufacturers and body builders.

A BETTER CAR, because it is a thoroughly coordinated, harmonious unit. Every part designed,

And the balance in 12 monthly payments of $92. Come in and see how easy it is to buy this Standard Six Coach on our liberal budget payment plan.

engineered and manufactured under one management, to work more efficiently with every other part.

A better car because Studebaker can afford to use finer upholstery, better steel, higher grades of lumber, more painstaking workmanship in hundreds of unseen places.

Scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation are built into every Studebaker. When the car which looked like an equal value while it was new, is breaking up, the Studebaker is breaking in.

That is why in Arizona—out where desert heat and rugged mountain trails test automobiles to the utmost—Studebaker sells double its normal proportion of cars. Every county in Arizona which has bought an automobile by its sheriff has bought a Studebaker.

This coach is not a one year car

As a splendid example of the facts stated above, we offer the Standard Six Coach. To appreciate this car you must see it and ride in it. We urge you to do so immediately. It is called a coach, but in reality a roomy five-passenger coupe.

It is a car that will give you faithful economical service. It is built to yield dependable, comfortable transportation for years and years.

Buy now—no more "yearly models"

This is the time of the year when men have hesitated to purchase an automobile, fearing that the car they bought in July would be made obsolete artificially by the announcement of new yearly models in August or September. Studebaker has discontinued the custom of presenting yearly models. Instead, Studebakers will be kept up to the minute in body styles and chassis design regardless of the calendar.

Come in NOW—and see this sturdy, dependable, one-profit Coach.

HAY-WIRE MAKE-SHIFT

A thrifty person makes use of what other folks count worthless. In most woods operations, the hay for the horses comes from bales and when these bales are broken the wise teamster lays up a supply of hay-wire for emergency use. It is said that a good toter would not think of starting off with his team without hay-wire any more than he would go without an axe, or a pall to water his horses. He has found that the use for hay-wire are legion. A broken harness is mended by it. It is used to repair the broken shafts of a pump or the pole of a tote sled. A broken sled chain is wired together. No one knows what the fate of many a trip would have been had there been no hay-wire at hand.

In camp as well as on the road, hay-wire has its uses. The stovepipes are secured by hay-wire. The lamp hanger is suspended from the roof by hay-wire. By it, a broken stove is held together. It is known that hay-wire has kept motor-houses, Fords and other gas engines running. The success of many a venture has hung on slender strands of hay-wire.

The abuses of hay-wire are as numerous as its uses. It is one thing to be prepared to meet an emergency with hay-wire, and quite another to depend upon it, instead of making proper repairs. There is a vast difference between pulling into camp "all hands working" and in that condition. The man who bridges the gap with hay-wire is ingenious; the man who uses hay-wire instead of making real repairs is shiftless. Some folks are always complaining. No greater slur can be cast against a man's equipment than to say: "It's a hay-wire outfit." Blessed is the man who knows when and how to use hay-wire.

PLEASANT DRINKS CAN BE MADE WITH MILK
A cool, refreshing milk drink will solve the problem. It may be made at home in a variety of flavors and takes only a few minutes to prepare. A department of home economics recommends this as the one method of offering milk to the child who would otherwise rebel against this healthful food.

A milk drink may be made by putting a tablespoon of fruit syrup, lemon juice, or a few drops of any good flavoring extract into a glass adding one or two teaspoons of sugar, and filling the glass with cold milk.

"Apple Blossom" may be made by using the juice of either fresh or canned strawberries for flavoring and coloring. The amount of juice to be used for each glass may be varied according to the taste of the drinker.

"Macaroon Milk" may be made by flavoring the milk with a few drops of almond extract and sprinkling the top with crushed macaroons.

Chocolate milk, which is now becoming popular, may now be enjoyed by those who like the flavor of chocolate. It may be made by adding chocolate syrup to milk or by cooling cocoa or chocolate mixtures.

A little nutmeg or cinnamon may be sprinkled over the top of a milk drink for variety.

A fancy name added to a milk drink will interest most children and even adults. Some of the names which have been used are—"Holstein Highball," "Jersey Julep" and "Brown-Eyed Susan." Straws to drink with make such drinks more inviting.

Cool, but not ice cold drinks will satisfy hunger. For this reason it is well to cool the milk rather than add ice when making a milk drink. Ice cold drinks taken at meal time tend to delay digestion.

A cool egg nog will be appreciated by one who is convalescing during warm weather. It may be made by beating an egg thoroughly adding 1 teaspoon of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon vanilla, and a little nutmeg, and filling the glass with milk. Stir well, serve with a straw.

A tablespoon of chocolate syrup may be used instead of the sugar if a chocolate egg nog is preferred. Whole raw milk is especially nutritious when served in milk drinks since it does not undergo any roasting process. It is rich in calcium and phosphorus as well as vitamins which are so necessary in maintaining the health of adults as well as children.

A quart of milk a day is not considered too much for every member of the family to consume in some form. It is a food as well as a drink and may be compared with meat, bread, and potatoes. Coffee or tea should be served to children even though it may have been diluted with milk or cream.

IN THE DAYS OF THE PICNIC

Summer is now in full swing. The solstice has passed, the sun has turned back from the north and until the equinox has come again, will blaze with glorious splendor on the earth. Also, until the end of the dog days, with each order as perforce compels humanity to relax. Even the ice wagon driver will feel the fever of Old Sol's rays, join in the universal yearning for "some vast wilderness some boundless country of shade." It has always been so. But that is no reason why each year it comes as though we never felt it before.

One impulse is common to all under the circumstances. To get away from the heat and dust, out somewhere, anywhere, to escape if possible the noxious conditions under which daily work must be carried on. Business yields to the urge, and hours are correspondingly shortened by earlier closing of stores, shops, banks and counting rooms. Yet this is less congenial to country-club, and on golf links or broad verandas seek the succor from heat that is so grateful, once it is found.

To the multitude comes the picnic. It may be of the Sunday School, the needle club, the lodge, some or any of the numerous groups combinations of fraternities into which Americans divide and multiply themselves. Whatever its sponsor, the picnic draws people out into the open air. To steady noisiness along the shore of sparkling lakes, even to the amusement parks, where various forms of entertainment are provided. Either or all of these serve to take the mind for the time off the other troubles of life. Sunbaths and chigger bites may alloy the pleasure, but even there are supportable.

The supper in the park, the street car ride for those who do not have a car. All these are variants of the picnic, the per. Finally, there is the one resource available to everyone who owns a home. That is the porch, front or back, screened or unscreened, wherein or on the happy householder may sequester himself in respect to the evening paper, the favorite magazine, access to the drinking water, and defiance to the sun and heat.

It comes once each year and lasts for weeks. Outdoors invites, nature succumbs, and dallies. The picnic is the hope of man disports himself in the hope of feeling a lot better if he stayed at home, but he will turn out to the next day, just the same. As Ruby Goldberg has it, they always come back for more.

COURTESY

Courtesy is the cheapest commodity in the world, yet it is probably the least used. It doesn't belong to any corporation and it isn't quoted in any federal commission—there are no restrictions on it. The price of courtesy is not fixed because there are no "responsible" responsibilities and all human relationships and approach their study in a new spirit.

Standing together the rising generation can build a new world by their suspicion, hatred, and war will be replaced by mutual trust, goodwill, and fellowship.

The above is the basis upon which the beginning of a World-Without-League-of-Youth in the next five years is laid with the desire to win a Warless World in the present generation.

STILL IN THE MAKING

In connection with recent earth tremors in the eastern states, certain scientists have assumed that the crust of the earth in the northeastern part of this country is not likely to greatly change in the future. However, Father Odenbach of John Carroll University at Cleveland advances the theory that the land in the northern middle West will continue to tilt more and more toward the south; that in about 200 years the Great Lakes will sink to the level of the Gulf of Mexico, and that in 10,000 years Niagara Falls will have disappeared.

Before getting excited over these possibilities, it would be well to recall the fact that the predicted changes would be less spectacular than many that have occurred in the past. In remote past ages, the crust of the earth was thrust upward by volcanic mountains and has subsided to form valleys. While the most recent continental areas are believed by most scientists to have existed from very early periods, there undoubtedly have been many changes in the position of the shore line. For example, the Atlantic and the Pacific are supposed to have made open water between the two Americas. Atlantic is supposed to have existed off the coast of Africa, Tasmania and Australia are supposed to have been one body of land and other transformations of land forms in the South Seas are supposed to have taken place.

Such changes in the earth's surface have not been historic except on a small scale, but there have been changes enough to remind us that many things which seem permanent are comparatively transient. Men themselves sometimes destroy their own landmarks and shift the centers of commerce. Sometimes this work is done by rain and wind, rivers, volcanoes, and deserts. The authorities are not in agreement as to whether it was human neglect entirely which allowed Mesopotamia to lapse from a land of productive farms into an almost barren waste. The drifting sands choked many streams in Mesopotamia and destroyed great cities that flourished a thousand years ago and now lie buried in the dust.

Against such possible fate the human race is much stronger and better prepared than many have been in the past. We can now deliver water to the driest soil from distances that once would have been an insuperable obstacle; we can adapt cities and farms to new trade conditions, and we can even put back the ocean by a little way and set up barriers against its encroachments. However, we are shocked now and then by a reminder that the supposed solid earth still bends and bulges a little, and that water carries it away or adds to it, that men themselves will let it go from productivity to sterility and then sometimes reverse the process.

Changes that require thousands of years easily escape eyes familiar with only the changes of a day or an hour.

STATES FLAG

Our flag is a wonderful thing, an emblem which we all respect and recognize. There are certain rules governing the manner in which the flag should be flown or draped and it is a flagrant insult to our country to misuse its emblem. The following "Ways to Honor the Flag" is given as a reminder.

1. Either fly the flag, freely unfurled, from a staff, or hang it flat, its full horizontal or vertical length falling evenly with the starchy flag at the top and to the observer's feet.

2. Whether indoors or out, the flag should never be fastened into a rosette, knotted, etc., or used as drapery. Use bunting.

3. Hoist the flag briskly; lower it slowly and ceremoniously, never permitting its folds to touch the ground.

4. At crossed staffs with another flag, it should be to the observer's left, its staff in front of the other flag.

5. In a cluster the national flag should be in the center or at the highest point in the group.

6. Suspended across the street between two rows of buildings, the flag should be hung vertical with starchy flag to the north in an east-and-west street and to the east in a north-and-south street.

7. In a parade the national flag should be on the marching right of all other flags, or if there is a line of flags, in front of the center of that line.

8. When flown at half-mast the flag should be run to the peak and then lowered; before lowering for the day, it should be again run to the peak.

9. Never permit Old Glory to be used as a pennant, as part of an athletic costume, or other menial use in the respect due it as the living symbol of America.

10. Honor the flag by developing yourself physically, mentally and morally. Become a loyal and capable defender of American ideals.

The preceding points should be carried to the letter by all who fly the flag following the rules given above.

If the national flag is flown by the street talk, joking, or noisiness should cease, male citizens should stand at attention, facing the flag, remove their hats and hold them over their hearts. Ladies should show respect by ceasing talking while the flag passes by.

THE FELLOWSHIP OF YOUTH

FOR PEACE

Statement of Purpose
"To our generation comes the challenge to abolish war. In rising to meet this challenge young men and women the world over are finding common ground. We realize that to outlaw war there must be world federation of youth."

"The Fellowship of Youth for Peace is a part of the world-wide movement of the Youth of all classes, nations, and races to recognize the unity of the human family and to live in this spirit of friendship. It will be our aim to let no interest of self, family, creed, class, or race separate us from our fellow men. We are determined to abolish war by the force of our united will."

The American Movement is a dynamic factor in this world federation. We Youth must courageously face the problems of race prejudice, economic conditions, education, our responsibilities and all human relationships and approach their study in a new spirit.

Standing together the rising generation can build a new world by their suspicion, hatred, and war will be replaced by mutual trust, goodwill, and fellowship."

The above is the basis upon which the beginning of a World-Without-League-of-Youth in the next five years is laid with the desire to win a Warless World in the present generation.

UNWHOLESOME HOMES

One of the complaints against modern civilization is that it develops so many unwholesome homes. The slums of the great cities are pointed out as evidence that they result from our economic order.

The communists of Russia claim that the "capitalistic" system fails to provide comfortable homes for the people. To which it can be replied, that even the people who dwell in our poorest homes, if they are willing to work will spend money wisely, are far better off than they are in poor old Russia, where in spite of the wonderful richness of the soil, famines are constantly recurring.

However, it has to be admitted that a large number of people in this country are dwelling in unsuitable homes, and something ought to be done about it. Such neighborhoods are not confined to great cities. Most of the medium sized and smaller ones have run down and disordered houses. Such places are also found in remote rural districts, that even they are not produced merely by faults in our industrial system. Some are due to misfortune, where people have had hard luck, and are exhausted by disease and poverty that they have no energy left to keep up their dwellings. Many are due to the indolence of their occupants.

Landlords are often blamed for allowing their buildings to continue in poor condition. Yet this is no energy left to keep up their dwellings. Many are due to the indolence of their occupants.

SHALL WOMEN SWEAR

On the other hand an anti-swearer comes across with this compelling argument: "It isn't worth it at all because it distorts the face. Cussing must be done forcibly to be effective. This hardens the mouth, wrinkles the brow and brings on premature age. An angry face is never beautiful. Men have used strong language since the beginning of time. That is why there are so few good looking men. That should settle the question. On the face of it, the negative wins. A representative of the swearing sex can only offer, as a clincher, this modest addendum to the argument: "With all men's swearing, at life, at fate, fortune, accident, misery, women and things in general, what has it got them?"

The thing that puts the finishing touches on a model home is to have it occupied by a model family.

Norway and Vicinity

AN ENJOYABLE OCCASION
Judge and Mrs. Morrill N. Packard of Baltimore and Mr. and Mrs. Ned Packard of Norway were entertained at lunch on Sunday last at the Whitman cottage on the east shore of the lake. The Judge has had a notable career in that splendid southern city, is a captivating talker and a most interesting story teller. That he should have blossomed out into life as a writer of real poetry of great surprise and delight to his close friends.

His ideas on public questions were well worth listening to. He thinks Governor Ritchie of Maryland the "coming man" in his party, which may be so, as he has made an admirable chief magistrate of his state.

The Judge showed a collection of views of our lake taken by Vivian Akers, and his snap shots with appropriate lines under each from his own pen, which might well be put into a booklet and would advertise Norway more than anything yet done.

The Judge's wife is a relative of Gen. Lewis A. Armistead, who was killed at the "Bloody Angle" in Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. She is a captivating conversationalist and is liked and admired by all who know her. There is no place outside of Baltimore where they enjoy themselves better than in Norway.

Jay, with Ned's lady, served at lunch. They are both fine cooks and none can prepare fish turned to a nicer brown, new peas to a more delicious taste and sherry to a finer flavor than they.

Miss Mildred H. McLean of Portland, when stepping from an electric car on July 2, broke a bone in her ankle and will be obliged to get around on crutches for some time.

A confetti dance was held Saturday night at Norway Lake pavilion. John Myrland's orchestra of Lewiston furnished music.

Deputy Sheriff Loton W. Gould has been turned over and janitor at the court house during the vacation. He was also in charge of the sheriff's office in the absence of Sheriff Torrey. Tony, the hand organ grinder here last week, was delighted with his reception and promised to play a return engagement in the near future. "Some good sports in Norway," was his parting comment.

The Grand Trunk has continued the job of filling the hollow below Norway depot between the tracks and Beal street. The work will extend nearly to Tannery brook bridge and provide extra space for loading cars.

Dan Reague of Holyoke, Mass., has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Chick, several days while on an auto trip through the mountains and Canada. He was an umpire with the Twin-Towns baseball club last season and has many acquaintances in this vicinity.

The Albany church was well filled, Sunday morning. If a man has raised his Bethel let no neighbor assume the right to decide the way that man should go. Let neighbors give encouragement and loving service to each other.

The real charm of touring lies in leaving the main-travelled highways and exploring the thousands of alluring side-paths. These dirt roads and trails lead to spots of rare beauty unvisited by the throng—where better camp-sites may be found—finer fishing and lovelier scenery. In a Ford car, you can enjoy the thrill of exploration and discovery. It is the one satisfactory means of travel for these narrow roads—light—yet so powerful that it will bring you through—easy to handle—sturdy and economical.

It will carry the whole family and the saving in cost often pays for the entire vacation.

Sanborn Writes Fishing Experiences

FISHING TRIP STORIES

The writer has been reminded by several people that he has failed to keep the readers of the paper informed as to his fishing trips this season. This is partly true. The same fishing grounds have been visited as in past years hence nothing new to record. It seems to be a reiteration of an old story but here it is up to date.

Following the Middlehead and Megalloway trips came a visit to Sugar Island, Moosehead Lake. It is the same old camp and cabin with new proprietor, Bill Meservy and J. D. Bridge have bought Van Skoik's interest in Greenleaf's Camps and have commenced to put the cabins in fine shape, not only for the summer season, but also for the winter.

A report of the catch has been stated—only 24 trout. The expense was large and the weather during the three week's stay bad.

The last trip was into the Rangely Lake District, Quimby Pond, was the objective but a stay of three days was made at the Dodge Pond Camps. This was necessary as we could not get accommodations at Scott's Camps.

Frank L. Badger bought these camps some years ago of J. W. Porter of Lynn, Mass. He has spent a small fortune on them. There are a dozen or more. Each having open fires, running water and baths. The fishing in its season is excellent. At the mouth of the Rangely River, Dodge Pond is a famous trout and salmon pool. Last September a six and a half pound trout was taken. It adorned the mantle over the office fireplace.

Round Pond is only six minutes walk from the camps. Both ponds are supplied with excellent boats. I didn't do much with the fish. I got a few, but not many.

Badger added one new 4 bed log camp last year and is to add another this year. Increase in business calls for it. His camps are all let for the balance of the vacation season. There will be room for the September fishing which is said to be good. It is surely "a camp that is different" as appears on the big sign at the roadway.

Quimby Pond, Scott's Camps, Mother Scott in control, is the place for big pond trout and field strawberries. Both are in abundance. Have visited these camps several years. The trout weigh from one-half to one and a half pounds. Evening or early morning they readily take a fly—provided it is the right kind. Have known of trout coming all day to a "sunken fly."

From July 2 to the 7th I took 39 trout, 12 were killed and 27 returned to the water. Six fish are allowed per day and fishing is to stop at sundown.

Tim Pond—postoffice; Tim, Maine, is the home of brook trout. Eustis is the port of entry for the fish. Rangely, a buck-board with rubber-tired wheels and a pair of big horses haul you in six miles. The road is not bad and the time consumed is about 2 hours and 40 minutes. The expense is $7.00. You get your money's worth to say nothing of getting the best brook trout fishing in New England.

The camps, some 50 of them, are rude log cabin affairs and some of them have been in use half a century but are in good condition. Here it is you find trout on the bill of fare three times a day from the opening to the closing of the season.

This has been followed for many years without any apparent diminution of the number or size of the fish. Only ten trout can be taken out on leaving the camp. The fish run from 4 to 6 to the pond though some weigh more. It is not uncommon to get one and a half pound trout. There is evidence of even three pound fish having been caught. Mind you, these are brook trout taken from a pond in which there is no other species of fish.

I was loth to believe this but was convinced after dressing an evening catch of more than a hundred fish. I found many of the fish in the stomachs of them. Bottom and surface feed only being present.

Big fish have been known to feed on the smaller ones. Mr. Armstrong, who assesses the fish, told me it seldom occurs. There seems to be plenty of feed in the pond and the trout are numerous.

The camp owners, Messrs J. K. Viles & Son, guarantee that trout will come to the fly every day during the entire season. The senior, Julian K. Viles has been here 39 consecutive years and really ought to know where the fish are. They are as plenty now apparently as in the early days when no care or attention was given to the natural breeding of the trout. The trout are all naturally "very highly colored and pink meat" though they vary in length, size, spots and colors yet no hatching bred stock has been put into the water.

I noticed some big headed long and slim fish yet the most of them are of "the pumpkin-seed" variety and closely resemble mountain stream brook trout. The most of them I have ever seen in this part of the state. The Lyford Ponds near Kokoj, above Moosehead, the trout are similar and possibly equally plenty.

Tim Pond—Little Tim and Big Tim—are supplied with water from three brooks with not too large a water shed. The outlet is dammed and carefully screened. The outlet brook falls over cascades too steep from Dead River for fish to navigate. The ponds are probably 1 3/4 miles long by 3/4 of a mile wide. It's a wild place and rocky with some sections of the shore line seem to be boggy yet I'm told it is not. There are some lily-pads and there are many springs in the pond and the trout do not collect in them as there is little change in the temperature of the water.

Messrs Viles care for the fish. The brook where they spawn are looked after. Logs and beaver dams are removed and the journey up the brook for the spawning trout made easy. After the spawning trout make their way down from fishermen when the trout begin to collect the last of August or in September for their annual trip up stream.

No garbage or other kind of refuse is allowed to be put into the ponds. Neither are gasoline propelled boats permitted on the water. But this means the trout have the best of the ponds. The trout have been kept to the demand for fifty years or more. In the three days stay there, six of the 146 trout caught were killed yet I took out the allotted ten fish. Barbell fish are often used in these ponds and I would suggest they ought to be more in use than at present.

The Cathedral Pines in Eustis is an attractive place. They much resemble the hard-pine so famous in N. Conway, N. H. In the grove which overlooked a bend in Dead River are two monuments: one commemorating Benedict Arnold's journey to Quebec in 1775 and the other the land proprietor of two townships and giving his name to them. The monument was erected by a grandson of the Arnold. Nearby is the Cathedral Pines Tea Room, owned and operated by Messrs. Meade & Rost. Good food and Stratton's public camping ground is in the day's work.

Pines also a permanent made brick double fireplace for the accommodation of tourists. Mr. O. B. Blanchard had installed as a gift to the ground, running spring water.

The register at the tea room in 95 days last season, shows 5,577 visitors. Some 225 gallons of Coca-Cola cream soda was sold. There was nothing of soft drinks and home made candy.

It was a busy place when we called but all were nicely waited on and invited to come again.—E. W. Sanborn.

MY FRYEBURG TRIP

By O. F. Whitman

The other day the writer went to Fryeburg for material to be used in his History of Oxford County. The day was one of the best of the season and all that could be desired. Rain the night before had laid the dust in the streets and a gentle breeze fanned our faces and banished any feeling of uncomfortable heat. We went by the way of North Lovell, some twenty miles from Norway, after a good spin of about three quarters of an hour, to see that well preserved old Civil War veteran and fine gentleman, Capt. William W. Durgin. He is 85 and one of the most intelligent of one finds in all that section of Maine. He enlisted from Stoneham serving in the 1st and 9th Regiments.

There are only 6 of the 87 Stoneham soldiers now living. Besides himself, there are Gardner McAllister, S. J. Dustin McAllister, 78, the youngest who went into the army from that town; George Seavey, 82, now living in Norway and Frank Han 82. The exact ages of these four are approximately determined from the Adjutant General's Reports.)

Captain Durgin rose from the ranks to orderly sergeant and was selected as one of the company which was ordered to escort the remains of President Lincoln from Washington to Springfield, Ill. after the infamous John Wilkes Booth had killed him.

The late Hon. George D. Bisbee, though only having been a Lieutenant in the war, was called Colonel by one of the judges of the Supreme Court and this title stuck to him as long as he there lived and Mr. Bisbee apparently liked it. Following that precedent, the writer has promoted for meritorious service Orderly Sergeant William W. Durgin to Captain.

It was a great pleasure to meet him and feel his warm, friendly grasp and words of welcome. He was sitting out of doors in the shade of a tree at Harry McKean's where he makes his home. Apparently waiting for me and upon going away towards the west, which here can be seen one of the finest views of the mountains in Oxford County. From his bedroom and room adjoining, the view is equally fine. He has a fine collection of which he would put to his eyes every little while and look away to the towering peaks and he told me during our stay that it was his practice every morning after rising to look at the mountains through his glasses.

When I asked him to tell what his reflections may sometimes be of what is over on the other side and in the Great Beyond for him and for his country and mind, may he long live to look at the lofty hills and dream his dreams. He gave me for the history a list of Stoneham's Patriot Dead, 13 in all, three of whom were killed in battle and these martyrs for their country in every town and plantation in the country will appear in the book when it is printed.

He told me much of the early history of Stoneham which having only 463 population in 1800 sent more men into the service than it had voters. Capt. Durgin is very proud of this as he may well be for no other town in the state can equal it.

We very reluctantly left him to his daily views of the towering hills and his dreams.

Another spin of forty-five minutes, all down through the pleasant and thriving places of Center Lovell, No. 4, Lovell village and Fryeburg Center where Gen. Joseph Frye, the proprietor of the township, once lived, and passing on our way the famous solitary rocky mass called Jocky Cap, we stopped in sight of the monument erected by the Society of Colonial Wars in Massachusetts, June 17, 1774, on the scene of Capt. John Lovell's fight with the Indians of the Pequaket tribe led by their famous chief Paugus. This battle took place 200 years ago on the 8th of May of old style, when thirty-four rangers engaged in deadly conflict for some ten hours nearly three times their number of savages. Paugus was killed and Lovell mortally wounded. Eleven others of the company died on the field and three more on their way home. Nine others were wounded but survived. The Pequaket were nearly destroyed. No more deadly struggle for the numbers ever took place on this continent.

Two of the tribe were soldiers in the Revolution, from Fryeburg, but as this was more than fifty years after the fight, one at least must have been very young at the time of the battle.

But "Old Paugus" or born subordinate was a soldier in the Continental Army. It is said. Two hundred years ago great pine trees grew a short distance back from the sea shore and with no undebush. Now they have all disappeared. Some scattering pines may be seen but bushes are growing up all over the scene of the contest.

In 1925 the Centennial of the fight was celebrated, a prominent Portland lawyer delivering the oration. This year there was no celebration. Battle Brook leading to the northeast side of the pond, is still well defined. It must have been much wider and deeper two centuries ago. Here it is supposed that some of the hardest fighting occurred.

The mouth of the stream appears to be gradually filling up. The writer crossed at its narrowest point and was fortunate in finding some flowering plants growing on the point running out into the pond of which he collected a few and took away for mementoes. Perhaps some of them may live. A "lucky stone" as Holman Day would call it, was found farther up the shore. It was white and smooth. It was noticed that a dozen autos were parked near the road. Children were wading in the water along the shore and young girls were doing the same thing near the beach.

Miss Mary Bennett, a very intelligent judge that from thirty to forty people of all ages were enjoying themselves in or out of the water. A week before, a lady from New Jersey, who claimed to be 6th in descent from Capt. John Lovell, visited the scene to see the place of the fight and take a snap shot of the monument. The place is one of great interest, which will remain with the years.

The attractive home of the southerly side of Main St. of Miss Anna Barrows was next visited. She is a very intelligent and cultivated lady, a teacher in the schools of New York City and a member of the Congregational church. Her father was Hon. Geo. B. Barrows, President of the Maine Senate in Civil War times. Miss Barrows has a large collection of books, pamphlets and papers which she kindly allowed copies such as the writer needed for the early history of the town and village to be made, days, some and loaning others to be returned. What was desired was exactly turned. What was wanted and from this material a good account of the early history of the town, it is believed, can be written and such other matter as will be of general interest.

Fryeburg in any reliable history of the county must in justice take the leading place. It was the first to be settled, the first incorporated town and the only town in what is now the county of Oxford to send from its patriot soldiers into the War for Independence. It has had no printed history, though deserving one as much as any in Maine. In part this will be supplied. Miss Barrows has a very large collection of heirlooms, bric-a-brac, curios, rare books, etc., filling two rooms of her pleasant home. They are well worth seeing and are very valuable.

Two hours ride over an excellent road, through the splendid villages of Bridgeport, in the old time called "Stevens Brook," North Bridgton, whose institution of learning Artemus Ward called once Ford's and afterwards Frost's Corner, and in the language of Samuel Peppery, "so home." We stopped for a drink of the finest spring water on the side of Harrison village. "That flowed from a bank and across the road." It was cool and delicious. From the Harrison line nearly to Norway Lake the road needed dragging. All the rest of the 75 miles was very good riding.

A surprise party was given Dustin McAllister, July 8, it being his 76th birthday. Twelve members of the Geo. M. Knight W. R. C. met at the hotel and marched to the house where Mr. McAllister sat on the piazza, led by one of the oldest members with the flag, Mrs. Emily Page and the members singing "Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching." The corps presented a very fine band. A birthday cake was made by Lilla Holson and presented by Grace Wood with appropriate remarks. All were invited into the house and refreshments were given by Rilla Marston and Mrs. George and then a social time was spent.

Mr. McAllister told them how he tried the third time before he could get a "home to call" and then had to go to Augusta for it.

He enlisted in March when he was only 14 years and 8 months old at the time. He was much pleased that he was remembered as it was the first birthday party he had ever had.

The Bear Hunt

Some few days ago a bear and three cubs were seen on the road leading from Four Corners in Albany to Bethel. They were near the trotting park, so called by its having been used by H. P. Elliott and his famous trotters, it being the only fine piece of road in the town that could be used for that purpose and near the Four Corners, where Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hobson's tea room, also the Norway Inn and two garages are in operation. So calling out the people to assist in capturing the bears, they all started out in lively pursuit with clubs and blankets, there being but one light in the party, they deemed it prudent not to fire on the old bear, but succeeded in firing two of the cubs in a large oak tree. They surrounded the tree where the cubs had taken refuge and cut down a limb and let it drop with the little bears. A blanket was thrown over it but little Bruin was too smart for them and escaped with its mate into the thicket and to the river a few feet away. E. K. Shedd of the brave bear hunters, one of the spectators, will not say which, said he thought it best not to get too near the tree when the cub fell as he had had some experience in seeing how a bear could use its claws. Mr. Hobson offered a good price to anyone who would get him one of them. It is reported they have been seen several times since but no one has been fortunate enough to capture one yet though a number have been securing the woods in the vain hope of securing the prize.
